Personal Spending

The currency of Morocco is the dirham (MAD), with bank notes found in the denominations of MAD 200, 100, 50 and 20 and coins issued in smaller values. Spain has adopted the common currency of the European Union, the Euro (EUR). In Europe, ATMs are the most convenient way to acquire cash. However, debit and credit cards are widely accepted across the country. While every traveller's spending habits may differ slightly, we have estimated the average daily expenses to help with budgeting for your next trip. Here you'll find the average cost for a meal or drink and advice for best practice in tipping.

Morocco

Lunch at restaurant	US$ 7-10
Dinner at restaurant	US$ 12-16
Sandwich at a stall	US$ 1-2
Sfenj - Moroccan Donut	US$ 0.30
Bottle of water	US$ 0.5
Coffee	US$ 1.5-2
Bottle of beer	US$ 2-4

Spain

Lunch at restaurant	US$ 7-10
Dinner at restaurant	US$ 10-15
Paella at a stall	US$ 5-8
Churros	US$ 3-5
Bottle of water	US$ 0.7
Coffee	US$ 2-3
Bottle of beer	US$ 2-4

Tipping

Tipping is not compulsory, but is encouraged for good service in Morocco. The general rule of thumb is to tip 5~10% in restaurants or to private services such as porters.

Tipping in Spain is considered optional, but is kindly appreciated for good service by waiters, drivers, and other similar services. At bars, cafes or in taxis, simply rounding your bill to the nearest Euro is commonplace.,

Shopping (Morocco)

Morocco is home to some of the oldest retail cultures in the world, meaning there's no shortage of souqs waiting to be explored. Haggling in Morocco is expected and welcomed. You'll notice prices are not often listed on items in the souqs, so evaluate what you're willing to pay and come prepared to bargain with the shopkeeper - it's all part of the fun!

Leather Goods

Moroccan leather is highly unique and the centuries-old tanning techniques are still practiced across the country today. The most famous tannery is Chouara Tanner of Fez, making it the perfect place to purchase quality, hand-crafted leather goods including slippers, bags, jackets, belts and wallets. Prices for leather goods start at approximately 10 USD.

Berber Rugs

Berber rugs and carpets are traditionally the craftwork of nomadic women from the Middle Atlas region and date back to the 2nd century BC. They are made from virgin wool from the sheep and can be found in souqs across Marrakech in all shades, sizes and shapes. Rug shopowners will encourage you into their store with the offer of tea, but feel no obligation to buy. Rug prices may range from 50 to 1,000+ USD.

Argan Oil

Used by the local Amazigh people for its healing properties, Argan Oil is immensely popular in Morocco. It is common to see women sitting on the front step of beauty shops crushing the kernels of the argan tree into paste, which is sold cosmetically for its healing properties to skin and hair. The regions surrounding Essauira and Agadir are the only places in the world where the specific tree grows. In this region you can purchase a quality 150ml bottle of the oil for approximately 20 USD.

Shopping (Spain)

Bustling with colour, local produce and atmosphere, the great city markets of Spain are an attraction, in their own right. Many locals can be found doing daily shopping in iconic marketplaces such as La Boqueria in Barcelona or Mercado de San Miguel in Madrid. There is an abundance of high-street fashion stores in the major cities or even flea markets if you are chasing a bargain.

Leatherwork

Leather production has been an integral part of Spain history since medieval times. Today, you can browse and buy anything from high-quality belts, bags, purses, and boots from leather workshops that line the streets and markets.

Flamenco Costumes

Home to the dramatic and passionate musical dance style of Flamenco, Spain is the perfect place to buy your own Flamenco dress, shawl or wooden Castanet instrument. A high-quality traditional Flamenco dress can cost approximately 100-200 USD depending upon design while hand-painted Castanets can be purchased for approximately 5 USD at the markets.

Vintage Abanico Fan

The Abanico Fan is an important piece of Spanish culture and history. While you can find a printed fan at almost every tourist shop in Spain, the flea markets of Barcelona and Madrid are the perfect place to visit if you are looking for a vintage fan that very few others may have! Expect to pay approximately 2 USD for a souvenir fan, or upwards of 10 USD for a vintage design at the flea markets.

Weather (Morocco)

The Moroccan climate varies according to season and region of the country. The Atlantic coast experiences minor temperature variations with 30°C summers and a warm Mediterranean climate all year round. November through to March sees the most rain fall in the coastal areas. Meanwhile, the climate in southern Morocco and inland can become more extreme with hot days and almost no rain. We strongly recommend bringing a set of light-weight long clothing, sunscreen, sunglasses, and hat to protect yourself. Overall, the best time to travel is considered March to June and September to December.

Weather (Spain)

Spain experiences a wide range of climates, varying from hot summers and mild winters along the Mediterranean coast to semi-arid inland temperatures. Spain is a widely popular summer destination with beautiful beaches and lovely weather, drawing in visitors from all around the world in this season. A great time to visit Spain is in late spring (April to May) or early Autumn (September to October) due to the pleasant temperatures and quieter crowds of tourists. However, Spain's diverse climatic offerings mean you can enjoy travelling through the country any time of the year. Along the east coast, major cities like Barcelona and Valencia can be remarkably busy throughout the summer with temperatures pleasantly sitting around the high 20s to low 30s. Meanwhile, parts of Andalucía are blissful in the winter with skiing in the mountains and sunbathing on a beach all available within one day's adventure.

Money Matters

Morocco

The dirham (MAD) is the official currency of Morocco, with bank notes found in the denominations of MAD 200, 100, 50 and 20 and coins issued in smaller values.

Major credit and debit cards are widely accepted in most cities and tourist sites across Morocco. However, if you are travelling off the beaten track, come prepared with a small stash of cash on hand for inexpensive purchases at local markets, souqs or for entrance fees and small meals. ATMs can be easily found in many places across the cities, however, are not as common in rural areas.

Spain

Spain's currency is the Euro (EUR / €) and credit or debit cards are accepted across all major Islands. We advise to carry some cash for small purchases from simple vendors and shops.

General

Please remember that everyone has different spending habits, some prefer to spend more on souvenirs, some on experiences and others on a night out! Make sure to budget your trip to your spending habits for shopping, drinking, and tipping. We recommend you do not exchange bulk sums of money at the airport, as the exchange rates are usually more favourable in the major cities. Your tour leader will be happy to help if you need any assistance.

Eating & Drinking (Morocco)

Moroccan cuisine carries an exciting blend of Mediterranean, Middle-Eastern, West African and Berber influences. The typical diet is quite healthy and incorporates plenty of vegetables. Moroccan cooking is strongly characterized by the subtle blending of spices, and Moroccans expertly use them to enhance, rather than mask, the flavor and fragrance of their dishes. Searching for unique and authentic dishes can often be overwhelming if you're not a local, so here's a few must-try dishes to get you started in Morocco.

Tagine: The famous slow-cooked Moroccan stew takes its name from the traditional clay or ceramic dish it is traditionally cooked in. The ingredients are arranged in a conical fashion and left undisturbed to cook until tender. Tagine is traditionally eaten straight from the cooking vessel.

Couscous: Originally from Morocco, Couscous is small balls of soft wheat or barley flours that are steamed in a pot. The traditional North African dish is typically served with meat or vegetable stew and is often eaten using your hands.

Zalouk: Zalouk is a common side dish of crusty bread and spread made from eggplants, tomatoes, garlic, olive oil and spices.

Harira: Used during Ramadan to break the fast at dusk, Harira is a hearty, traditional Moroccan lentil soup.

Khobz: Typically baked in communal wood-fired ovens and served with an array of meals, this crusty bread is a must-try in Morocco.

Mint Tea: A green tea base with lots of mint leaves and sugar, making for a refreshing drink.

Baghrir: Usually eaten at breakfast, these bubbly, sweet pancakes are a standout for many travellers to Morocco. What makes them different to Western pancakes is that they are made with semolina, thinner than flapjacks but thicker than crepes.

Chebakia: Soaked in the syrup of honey and rosewater, then sprinkled with sesame seeds – this sweet, fried pastry can be found in many corner shops and bakeries, especially during Ramadan.

M'hanncha: Translating to 'coiled like a snake', this large, coiled sweet pastry is meant to be shared. It can be cut into smaller pieces and pulled apart to reveal almond paste, pistachios and a sugary paste.

As well as the traditional dishes there are also a lot of western style foods available in the larger cities. Kebabs can also often be found in many souks or stalls and are generally served with a spicy sauce.

Morocco's national drink is mint tea, a green tea flavoured with sprigs of mint and sweetened with large amounts of sugar. Also common at cafes and street stalls are a range of freshly squeezed juices and mixed fruit milkshakes! Moroccan tap water is usually considered as safe to drink, however may upset your stomach if not used to it. Hence, we would recommend to drink bottled water which is readily available throughout the country. Morocco typically gives drinking alcohol a low profile, but bars in most tourist areas stay open to late and wines, beers and spirits are widely available with laws around alcohol liberal for visitors. Local beers are relatively inexpensive and a few worth trying include Flag, Stork and Casablanca.

Eating & Drinking (Spain)

Food and drink are two of the most iconic elements of the Spanish culture. Tourists are often lured to Spain, particularly the South, to try the world-famous seafood, tapas, pintxo and endless jugs of fresh sangria. The Spanish are known to eat late in the evening, with a long gap between lunch and dinner. Breakfast is short, sharp and to the point, consisting of a strong coffee and pastry or churro. But nothing is more quintessentially Spanish than going for tapas or pintxo in the afternoon or late evening. This style of eating involves standing at a bar and trying a range of small plates or toothpicks piled with food while enjoying a

Tapas can be anything from stuffed olive appetizers to gourmet slow-cooked beef cheek served over a sweet potato puree. Tapas is a culinary experience that cannot be missed while visiting Spain. Searching for unique and authentic dishes can often be overwhelming if you are not a local, so here is a few must-try dishes to get you started.

Paella: Like flamenco or football, paella is synonymous with Spain. The dish consists of rice cooked in a shallow, wide pan with saffron to give it that unique yellow colour with either seafood, vegetables, meats, and more traditionally rabbit.

Croquettes: A tapas favourite, croquettes are little balls of fried bechamel filled with goat's cheese, beef, ham, or broccoli.

Churros: Traditionally served at breakfast, Churros are deep-fried, doughy bread sticks dipped in chocolate and sugar.

Jamon Iberico: Wafer thin slices of cured pork that can be eaten on it's own or with bread, tomato or Tortilla de Espanola: A classic Spanish dish, it's simply a potato omelette. Usually served as tapa, this delicious comfort food is served in most bars and cafes in Spain.

Patatas Bravas: Chunks of potato frieds and served with sweet and spicy pimentón – a Spanish paprika

Sangria: The perfect partner to Spain's golden hour every Summer afternoon, sangria is well-known alcoholic beverage across Spain with chunks of apple, lemon and orange chilled in a jug of red wine.

Spanish Chorizo: A fermented, cured pork sausage seasoned with spices and served by itself or with cheese and bread.

Pulpo: Commonly known as grilled octopus, this delicious dish is flavoured simply with Spanish paprika and olive oil. It is an extremely popular dish as tapas bars, often served on wooden plates with toothpicks.

One of the greatest pleasures of eating out in Spain is the chance to sample an array of the country's best wines. Over 50% of Europe's vineyards are in Spain. Restaurant wine starts at around 5 to 10 euro per bottle. Beer (cerveza) is nearly always lager in Spain and usually comes in 300ml bottles or botellines. Popular beers worth trying include San Miguel, Cruz Campo, Mahou and Estrella de Galicia.

Internet Access

Morocco

Most cafes, hotels and restaurants in large cities of Morocco provide free Wi-Fi, but the connection may be spotty or slow. If you wish to use your own 3G/4G Data, be sure to enable data roaming on your mobile. Purchasing a Moroccan SIM card for the duration of your tour may be a cost-effective alternative. Make sure that your phone is unlocked before you leave home so a local SIM will be compatible. The three largest telecommunications networks operating in Morocco are Maroc Telecom, Inwi and Orange.

Spain

Internet access is common in hotels, cafes, and restaurants across Spain. Many internet cafes can be found in the cities as well. If your current Mobile SIM provider is from the EU or UK, it may be possible that you can use your data roaming free of charge in Spain. Please consult your mobile provider to find out more. Alternatively, purchasing a Spanish SIM card for the duration of your tour may be a cost-effective option.

Culture and Traditions

Morocco

Over centuries of trade and mutual interaction, Moroccan culture and traditions have been significantly influenced by the surrounding people and nations.

Located at the tip of North Africa, Morocco has been the gateway between Europe and Africa, while also neighbouring both the Atlantic and the Mediterranean. This unique blend is beautifully reflected in various facades of Moroccan culture from architecture to music...

Most of the Moroccan society can be considered traditional, with respect for elders, connection to family and giving alms to the poor recognised as hallmarks of everyday life for locals.

Ramadan carries great importance for the nation and is considered a time of spiritual rejuvenation in the Islamic calendar. During this month, Muslims fast from sunrise to sunset – refraining from eating, drinking or smoking during daylight hours.

As a Muslim country, Morocco is a modest nation who deeply respects religion. If you're planning to go on a holiday to Morocco during Ramadan, please be mindful that many restaurants and shops will either be closed or operating on reduced hours during this time.

Spain

Spain has one of the most distinctive cultures in all of Europe. Well known for its lively fiestas, routine for siestas and passion for food and drink – there is much to love about the Spanish way of life. The nation is made up of 17 distinct autonomous communities, each home to unique traditions, customs and cuisines shaped by politics, religion and centuries of mutual interaction.

Roman Catholicism is deeply embedded in Spanish society, and Christian holidays like Easter and Christmas are widely celebrated or acknowledged. Additionally, every different region or city in Spain has its own patron saint. Each city or village celebrate their saint with bonfires, feasts, and parades.

Religion, Etiquette and How to Dress

Morocco

Morocco is a tolerant, yet traditional nation with strong cultural values. Religion is a crucial factor in the life of Moroccans, and it is intermingled with daily activities. It is estimated that more than 98% of the population is Muslim, and the way people dress and interact with each other is influenced by religion. The religious holidays of Ramadan and Eid are the most significant events for Muslims. A wide array of cultural norms, including how people dress and interact with the opposite sex, are influenced as such. Especially in the rural areas, conservative clothing may be preferred.

As a general guideline, we recommend wearing loose-fitting, comfortable clothing and walking shoes while travelling in Morocco. Please also keep in mind that when visiting religious sites, appropriate attire is required. It is recommended to pack at least one set of modest clothing that covers both shoulders and knees, to be worn when visiting mosques and other religious complexes. A headscarf for women is necessary when visiting religious complexes in Morocco. Access to certain mosques and holy places is forbidden to non-Muslims, much to the disappointment of many tourists.

Spain

Spaniards are renowned for being welcoming and generous people who are passionate about sharing their culture with visitors. It is important to remain respectful when discussing the politics of Spain as locals may have passionate views towards whichever of the 17 distinct communities they belong to. Drinking in public is commonplace and acceptable across the nation, however public nuisances are not welcome. The Spanish are quite relaxed with the dress code of tourists, with many coastal destinations seeing flocks of visitors spend their days in swimwear and summery attire. However, Travel Talk does recommend packing a set of clothing that covers both your shoulders and knees for visiting religious complexes. Your Tour Leader can advise when such dress will be necessary throughout your trip.
