Making Your Own Way to the Starting Point

We recommend to use airport taxis. Lima International Airport (SJO) is just 21 kilometres from the hotel. It costs between 25-30 USD from airport to the hotel, and takes approximately 20 minutes.

Highlights

- * Cusco: Cusco, a city in the Peruvian Andes, was once capital of the Inca Empire, and is now known for its archaeological remains and Spanish colonial architecture.
- * Huayllabamba: A town in Southern Peru, capital of the district Huayllabamba in the province Urubamba in the region Cusco. It is located in the Sacred valley.
- * Lima: Lima is the capital and the largest city of Peru. It is located in the valleys of the Chillón, Rímac and Lurín rivers, in the central coastal part of the country.
- * Machu Picchu: Machu Picchu is an Incan citadel set high in the Andes Mountains in Peru, above the Urubamba River valley. Built in the 15th century and later abandoned.
- * Sacred Valley: The Sacred Valley is in Peru's Andean highlands. Along with the nearby town of Cusco and the ancient city of Machu Picchu, it formed the heart of the Inca Empire.

Day 2: Lima, Cusco

Fill up on breakfast before heading to the airport for an included flight to Cusco! The city of Cusco is the gateway to Peru's incredible valleys, ruins, villages, and world-famous trails. Follow your guide around the centre of Cusco to discover in-depth the Capital of the Inca Empire! You'll visit San Blas, a quaint neighborhood that is home to many renowned artists. Stroll along its cobblestone alleys as you make your way toward its iconic church, which features a beautiful pulpit carved from a single block of wood. Then, follow the guided walking tour towards Hatun Rumiyuq Street, translating to "Of the Old Rock", to admire the famous Piedra de los Doce Ángulos (Twelve-Sided Stone). Feel free to join an optional city tour to leave no stone unturned or finish up a big day exploring Cusco with an optional cocktail making class to perfect the art of Peru's favourite cocktail, the Pisco Sour!

Day 3: Cusco, Sacred Valley

This morning we'll head towards the Sacred Valley, where our journey into the ruins and mystique of Peru truly begins! But first, we'll visit Awanacancha – home to the world's most beautiful camelids (Llamas, Alpacas, Vicuñas, and Guanacos). After snapping a few Llama selfies and witnessing the ancient Incan art of weaving, hop back on board the coach and grab a window seat as we continue into the depths of the Sacred Valley. We'll make another stop at Pisac, where Incan and colonial influences blend to create a unique way of life for the locals. Explore the quaint town famous for artisan markets where you'll be able to splash some cash on fine jewelry, ceramic and textile craftwork! Visit the Ccor Ccor Community and learn of their rural way of life in the Sacred Valley. The community has preserved its pre-Hispanic ancestral customs and the villages open their doors to share their way of life, beliefs, traditions, and culture. Join the Ccor Ccor people for a traditional lunch surrounded by the serenity of Sacred Valley.

Shopping

Peru has some of the most unique souvenirs in the world from textiles to dried sweet corn, bracelets, ponchos, woven rugs and of course, alpaca clothing. Leaving Peru with an alpaca souvenir is almost a rite of passage, on par with trekking to Machu Picchu. You'll find many local and authentic markets selling varieties of alpaca products along the rural villages of Peru. Simply ask your local guide where they recommend!

Tipping

Tipping is appreciated for good service in Peru. Generally, a 10% tip is a welcome gesture for good service in any restaurant, café or formal bar with service in Peru. If taxi drivers provide a good service, we recommend adding a few Sol to the fare or rounding to the most suitable denomination. You may also consider tipping your leader and driver for outstanding service at the end of your trip. The amount is entirely a personal preference.

Essential Information: Peru

Passport & Visas

Australia, New Zealand, British, Canadian and America (USA) passport holders do not require a tourist visa to visit Peru and may be eligible to stay for up to 6 months, depending upon nationality. Some other nationalities may be required to apply for tourist visas through an embassy or consulate of Peru. Please ensure that you check with the Peruvian Embassy or Consulate of your country for up-to-date visa

Passport validity entry requirements: Travellers entering Peru must also carry a passport or travel document with a minimum of 6 months validity remaining.

This information is provided only as a guidance, we strongly advise that you check with the consulate or embassy as this information can change at any time and with little notice. It is your responsibility to make sure that all the required travel documents are ready when travelling

Travel Advice

We are closely monitoring the latest travel updates to Peru and follow the advice of the UK Foreign Office. For the latest travel advice from the UK Foreign, Commonwealth & Development Office, please visit <https://www.gov.uk/foreign-travel-advice/peru>

Please consult with your doctor for the latest medical travel information and any vaccinations you may need. We recommend that you bring any personal medical requirements and medications with you as these may be difficult to obtain while on tour.

Weather

The weather in Peru can be split into two seasons: wet and dry. The best time to visit Peru if planning to visit or trek to Machu Picchu is during the dry season between May and October. During these months, Peru sees minimal rainfall with bright blue skies in the Andes and chilly nights. The climate significantly alters by altitude with mountainous regions such as the Andes and Inca Trail seeing major drops in temperature overnight. The summer months (wet season) of December to March are warmer but travellers can expect more rain with the wettest of these months being either January or February. Meanwhile, the Amazon rainforest has a tropical climate and is hot and humid with rainfall year-round.

Money Matters

The official currency of Peru is the Nuevo Sol (PEN). For context, 1 USD equates to approximately 3.5 Sol. Credit and debit cards are accepted at major hotels and tourist attractions across Peru but are not accepted for small payments such as meals or snacks. We recommend carrying Sol cash to cover daily expenses, especially when travelling through regional areas or trekking the Inca Trail. ATMs are common and US dollars is a legally accepted currency in major cities but is typically reserved for more expensive purchases. We recommend you do not exchange bulk sums of money at the airport, as the exchange rates are usually more favourable in the major cities. Your tour leader will be happy to help if you need any assistance.

Please remember that everyone has different spending habits, some prefer to spend more on souvenirs, some on experiences and others on a night out! Make sure to budget your trip to your spending habits for shopping, drinking, and tipping.

Eating & Drinking

Peru is widely regarded as a dream destination for food lovers. So much so, that in 2016 was crowned 'World's Leading Culinary Destination' by the World Travel Awards for the fifth year in a row! Peruvian food is a mixture of hot and cold on the same plate with ingredients and cooking techniques from Africa, Europe and East Asia coming together to create culinary delights. When travelling to a new destination with menus in foreign languages, it can often be tricky to know what to order for a truly authentic experience. So, here are a few of our favourite, authentic Peruvian dishes to get you started:

Ceviche: This coastal dish consists of raw fish marinated in lime juice, chillies and onions. Ceviche is considered Peru's signature dish and is best enjoyed with sweet potatoes and corn.

Lomo Saltado: Considered a staple in Peru's mainstream cuisine, Lomo Saltado is made with beef sirloin strips marinated in soy sauce, vinegar and spices which are then stir-fried with tomatoes and onions. The dish is frequently served with potatoes or fries and rice.

Cuy al Horno: Cuy al Horno is guinea pig that is stuffed with herbs, baked and then served whole – head and all! Traditionally, this dish is reserved for special occasions, however it is common across menus in Cusco with many foreigner's game to try.

Aji De Gallina: A creamy curry-like dish of shredded chicken prepared with cream, ground walnuts and cheese. The curry chicken is often served on a bed of rice, boiled potatoes, and black olives to give it a rich, chowder-like consistency.

Juane: This traditional Amazonian boiled dish was invented to eat on the go. It consists of rice, meat, eggs and olives rolled into a ball and wrapped in a macaw flower leaf.

Choritos a la chalca: This dish consists of mussels marinated in lime juice and then filled with onions tomatoes and corn kernels.

Picarones: Donuts made from squash and sweet potato and served up with lashings of sweet syrup. You'll find these deliciously sweet treats sold on the streets of Lima.

Picarones: Donuts made from squash and sweet potato and served up with lashings of sweet syrup. You'll find these deliciously sweet treats sold on the streets of Lima.

Drinking alcohol is typically done as a social activity in Peru and is often a community-orientated process. Pisco is considered Peru's signature and most popular spirit, made from pressed grapes, and used in cocktails or drank straight. Pisco Sour is the must-try cocktail including a bizarre combination of pisco, egg white and lime juice. It's a strong and sour drink that you'll have the chance to make and try for yourself on an optional cocktail making class in Cusco. Pilsen Callao, Cusqueña, and Cristal are the three most popular

Internet Access

Most cafes, hotels and restaurants in large cities of Peru provide free Wi-Fi, but the connection may be spotty or slow. If you wish to use your own 3G/4G Data, be sure to enable data roaming on your mobile, however it may be limited in rural and remote areas. Purchasing a Peruvian SIM card for the duration of your tour may be a cost-effective alternative. Make sure that your phone is unlocked before you leave home so a local SIM will be compatible. Your guide will be able to provide advice on where to purchase SIMs.

Culture, Traditions

Peruvian culture is a lively mix of centuries-old Hispanic and native traditions. The two main native groups of Peru include: Quechua and Aymara. Mutual respect is a key point to Peruvian culture and Peruvians express this through appreciation of music, literature, art, dance, clothing, religion, education and sports. For example, the Andes region is famous for its colourful dresses with indigenous women layering themselves in bright traditional clothing as a symbol of their ethnic representation. The Uros group are one of the most fascinating of the various Peruvian ethnic groups. Their culture is one of the oldest still practiced in present-day Peru. The Uros are the traditional settlers of Lake Titicaca, and originally built and lived on floating islands to defend themselves from the arrival of enemies if they needed to make a quick escape. Approximately 75% of the Peruvian population identify as Catholic, followed by 11% identifying as

Etiquette and How to Dress

Peruvians tend to take great pride in their appearance and presentation. Most will wear nice clothing and avoid wearing old or dirty clothing in public. When visiting religious sites and complexes, it is essential to wear clothing that covers your shoulders, chest and knees as a sign of respect. It is prohibited to consume illicit drugs in Peru and the topic of drugs is not considered lightly with such comments considered an insult
